

We dug near the top of Bacon Rind and found 155cm of snow. Our primary concern is with the upper snowpack. As it warms and wets we can expect an increase of avalanche activity on the ice crusts. Facets are still dry and soft at the bottom of the pack and I got this layer to break with an ECTP29. Photo: GNFAAC

Advisory Region
Southern Madison
Longitude
-111.10W
Latitude
44.96N

Forecast link: GNFAC Avalanche Forecast for Thu Mar 19, 2020

Southern Madison, 2020-03-18